Preparation for hunting in Alaska

At some point in every hunter's career we find ourselves in a place where we feel completely isolated and unprepared for the situation in front of us.

It could be related to the weather, terrain our fitness or the limitation of our hunting skills – often it's a combination of all these factors. When hunting in a remote wilderness environment, these factors are magnified exponentially. Our preparation doesn't just affect the likely success of our hunt, but also our very survival.

When Steve and I decided to take on the challenge of a remote wilderness hunt in Alaska for moose, caribou, grizzly and black bear, we committed fully to preparing for what would become the defining hunt of our lifetime. Leaving nothing to chance, we committed to a brutal 4-month training programme to prepare our bodies, sought expert marksmanship tuition to hone our rifle skills and meticulously prepared our equipment. Nothing was left to chance. Steve and I are regular hunting companions and great friends, but this journey brought us even closer - no longer friends, but brothers on a shared voyage of discovery into the unknown. I had belief in my preparation, confidence in my skills and faith in my equipment. Most importantly, I had trust in Steve and his ability to carry me through the tough times – of which there were many.

I can recall the moment I crested the final hill towards camp carrying a rack weighing over 50kg - the last load from our epic moose pack out. We had all carried our fair share of over 250kg or moose meat through a twisted maze of willow and alder bushes clawing at our legs and arms, through deep ravines with swollen rivers and up steep, slimy climbs until we'd finally brought everything home. I was exhausted and sore from my efforts, but never doubted we'd succeed in our endeavours – as a team.

A man in full camouflage gear, including a hooded jacket, cap, and sunglasses, is shown in a natural outdoor setting. He is holding a rifle with a scope. Three white lines with horizontal bars at the end point to specific features of his jacket: the hood, the underarm area, and the front zipper.

MUFLON

Don't settle for second-best!

The mouflon in Europe originally stemmed from Sardinia and Corsica, and spread through Asia Minor and Central Asia to Mongolia.

Since the beginning of the nineteenth century, it has been introduced to several countries in central and northern Europe, where the ram's large horns have become sought-after hunting trophies.

The mouflon sheep has acute senses, particularly its sight, hearing and sense of smell. It readily adapts to its natural surroundings and climatic changes, and is a difficult quarry which calls for endurance and focus on the part of the hunter. It is these characteristics which have inspired us at Deerhunter.

We must learn from nature to become better at negotiating the great outdoors, and the better we become, the greater our success.

One of the ingredients of this success is modern apparel. It takes single-mindedness to continually develop new and contemporary equipment which matches the challenges involved in fulfilling truly ambitious goals such as taking home the mouflon as a hunting trophy.

The range is a reward for all our loyal customers worldwide – the true Deerhunters.

You deserve the best!

Team Realtree Hunt with an Edge

Hunting is about being at one with nature.

We must use all of the knowledge and tools at our disposal to successfully harvest our quarry. As hunters we're conservationists first and foremost. It's our responsibility to ensure healthy populations of game exist for many generations to come. We must know our land intimately, its flora and fauna, and we're careful to choose the right animal to harvest and always employ a holistic approach to sustainable game management.

We are also students, constantly learning from those more experienced and knowledgeable, adding their experiences to our own. When we choose to harvest wild game as a food source we must immerse ourselves in the natural world. We must blend seamlessly into our environment and have complete respect for our surroundings. We should embrace new technologies, which have given us access to highly advanced clothing, equipment and camo, all of which combine to give us an edge. Realtree has been the world's leading creator of the most effective hunting camouflage patterns for over 30 years and partners with the leading outdoor brands.

Realtree camo patterns have enabled hunters across the globe to harvest magnificent animals all over the world, with bow, rifle, shotgun and airgun. We can get closer to our quarry than ever before, confident in the knowledge that we are still concealed.

Realtree EDGE™, allows you to blend into your hunting environment at close range, with natural elements arranged in a way to disrupt the human form at a distance.

Hunt with an EDGE®, Realtree EDGE.

Norway – deer hunting 400 metres up

I've been deer hunting in Sogn, western Norway together with 14 hunters with a permit to shoot about 20 deer a year. The hunting terrain is often deer country with steep slopes from the fjord rising up 500-600 m above sea level.

The deer tend to seek shelter higher up when they are disturbed, so it's usually best to start hunting lower down and then work your way upwards. A hunting group will therefore get up early to make it up to the highest point in the terrain and find a good lookout spot.

It is sheer and sometimes rough terrain, and to avoid frightening the animals before the hunt, we go up in a different part of the countryside to where the hunt will take place - it often takes a couple of hours.

Once the positions have been allocated and everyone is ready, the hunt starts from down below. A group spreads out to cover as large an area as possible, and move forwards and upwards to drive the animals towards the hunters.

Once the hunt is over, the hardest job starts – if we've been lucky enough to shoot any animals of course.

First, we start by gutting the animals on the spot, and then we bring them down from the mountains. One or two people go in front and pull, while a third person walks behind, acting as a brake when necessary and steering over the uneven terrain. This is the most demanding part of the hunt and can take a long time.

The animals have to be dragged down to the nearest farm track, frequently down from an altitude of more than 400 m where they were shot. The animals are transported the final stretch to the butchering shed by tractor. Here, the animals are skinned before they are hung up to age in the cooler room.

The R8 has again raised the level of performance you should expect from your hunting rifle: Introducing the R8 Carbon Success!

The exceptional qualities of Carbon fiber have made a lasting impact on our daily lives. Bicycles, automobiles, and even the airplanes above us rely on the strength and light weight properties of this dynamic material. So why not blend the ergonomic perfection found in the R8 Success stock with a material strong enough for space travel? Devised by the team in the Blaser Custom Shop, it is 300 grams lighter than the R8 Professional Success. What might not look like so much on paper can make all difference when you are hunting in difficult terrain.

The buck I've always dreamed of Suddenly a huge head appears in the gap...

I slowly stalk along the forest path before turning into a logging trail between two thickets. I'm moving quietly thanks to the wet foliage. The wet forest floor unveils its unique smell after the rain on this summer evening and I stay for a moment and take in my surroundings. The tension in the air is palpable, despite the idyll that surrounds me.

I set myself up and wait a long time before I produce the first squeaks from my roe caller. I see movement on the edge of the thicket. 'That was a deer,' I say almost aloud to myself. I start again with some quiet and cautious peeps. I hear fast, powerful jumps in the foliage, small branches break - something is coming straight towards me.

Only a few seconds have passed when a massive head suddenly appears in a gap in front of me. As if in a painting, a buck is standing in front of me and looking right at me. It's a buck like I've never seen here before. Powerful in the body, strong and high in the antlers – it's the buck I've always dreamed of.

My finger is on the trigger, the crosshair rests on his shoulder and the shot rings out. As if in slow motion, the buck appears to rear one last time and falls into the wet beech leaves after a few metres. As I step closer I am happy and shaken at the same time.

A real, dream buck is there in front of me. I sit on a tree stump next to it and enjoy the moment. I sit there for a long time. It's an evening I'll never forget.

3M™ Thinsulate™

The original warmth-without-bulk insulation, 3M™ Thinsulate™ Insulation is the brand trusted for warmth

3M™ Thinsulate™ Insulation enhances your ability to enjoy the outdoors, providing:

- Breathable, lightweight warmth and durability.
- Up to nearly twice the warmth of other synthetics and one-and-a-half times the warmth of 550 fill down when equal thicknesses are measured.
- Highly breathable, “keep dry comfort” under damp, sweaty or rainy conditions.
- The freedom of movement to enjoy your time outdoors with less restriction.
- Dependable thermal performance through repeated washings.

Why is 3M™ Thinsulate™ Insulation so efficient?

It's the fibers. The unique fiber constructions of 3M™ Thinsulate™ Insulation are up to 10x smaller than the fibers of other synthetic insulations, which helps make them more effective at trapping insulating air. The more fibers it has per square cm, the better an insulation can perform in containing the body's radiant heat.

Exceptional performance even in wet conditions:

The fibers in most 3M™ Thinsulate™ Insulation products absorb less than 1% by weight of water, and are designed to keep you warm even in damp conditions. No other synthetic insulation performs better to help prevent rain penetration/ water absorption under real-world conditions.

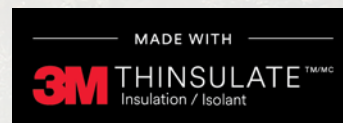

Superior insulating efficiency does not diminish breathability:

3M™ Thinsulate™ Insulation allows moisture the body creates to exit, allowing you to be active and warm. Durability over the lifetime of the garment.

Comfort for the wearer - keeping warm using 3M™ Thinsulate™ :

- Thinner
- Warmer
- Lighter

When insulation really performs, it's never too cold.

Outdoor survival guide

Soon it's the start of the roebuck hunting season and I feel an almost overwhelming urge to get outside.

Hunting enables me to survive my hectic working days and gives me the time for the simple life, with my backpack and rifle and opportunity to recharge mentally.

The aim is to track down a buck, to get it in my sights and bring it back home. Before the hunt I need to plan my next stalking expedition.

I pack simply, but wisely:

I choose basic necessities such as clothing that's suitable for the weather, so that it doesn't disturb my focus. Comfortable footwear that can withstand the terrain, even when walking long distances over several hours. I select a small, compact backpack with a variety of compartments. I use the larger compartments for my Jetboil stove, binoculars and blanket. The smaller compartments for a length of rope, coffee and lunchbox as well as the essential first-aid kit.

In addition to lunch, I take various snacks; chunks of ryebread and freeze-dried food that taste much better outdoors than they otherwise do.

Coffee-lovers might enjoy brewing their coffee the old-fashioned way, but it's not particularly practical, and there is always the risk of smoke spoiling the trace.

I carry the first-aid kit for both my own and others' sakes, and because it enables me to do the right thing in the event of an accident.

I always carry disposable gloves, bandages, plasters, an emergency blanket, eyewash, tweezers and sports tape with me. It can be invaluable if anything happens, from a small cut to a serious accident. Accident scenarios should be considered from the start of the day to the end – hunting is a serious sport, but I couldn't survive without it.

Mercedes-Benz Vans presents the X-Class

The first pickup from a premium manufacturer

The segment of mid-size pickups are growing worldwide, and Mercedes-Benz wants to be a part of that. The X-Class is the first pickup from a premium manufacturer.

The Pick-up segment was around 2.2 million vehicles in 2016 and is expected to increase to 3.2 million vehicles in 2026. Mid size pickups are already part of a normal city scape in many countries, especially on the southern hemisphere.

Pickups are no longer pure work horses, but are also gaining popularity as leisure type vehicles, for example hunters. It is expected that the X-class will open up to new customers, as the ML did 20 years ago.

The performance of the X-Class is not only thrilling off-road, but also on the road. The wide track, the long wheelbase and the sophisticated design of the comfort suspension with a double wishbone front axle, the multi-link rear axle with a rigid section and coil springs at both axles ensure plenty of on-road driving pleasure and driving dynamics – with no compromises when off-road.

Two equipment lines for the X 350 d 4MATIC

The X 350 d 4MATIC is available in the equipment lines PROGRESSIVE and POWER, both set new standards for comfort and perceived value in the mid-size pickup segment. They differ in design, level of equipment and functionality. In both equipment lines the X 350 d 4MATIC is equipped with Keyless-Go and THERMOTRONIC 2-zone air conditioning as standard.

The PROGRESSIVE line includes the following as standard: 17-inch 6-spoke light-alloy wheels, air vents in electroplated silver chrome, leather-lined steering wheel and parking brake, seats in black Posadas fabric (optionally ARTICO man-made leather/DINAMICA microfibre), the infotainment system Audio 20 USB and an 8-speaker system. Standard features in the high-end equipment line POWER include a simulated, chrome-plated underride guard in the front bumper, a chrome-plated rear bumper, 18-inch 6-spoke light-alloy wheels, LED High Performance headlamps, dashboard with large trim element in a matt black pixel look and with upper section in ARTICO man-made leather, seats in ARTICO man-made leather/DINAMICA microfibre (optionally black or nut brown leather), electrically adjustable seats and the infotainment system Audio 20 CD with a multifunctional touchpad.

Layer upon layer guide

SORT OUT YOUR INNER, MIDDLE AND OUTER LAYER

Deerhunter

Deerhunter's layer guide

Clothes that keep you warm and dry when the weather shows its teeth are a must. But what is most important when you need to invest in hunting apparel?

The more you are going to use your hunting apparel, the more important it is to invest in the right products from the outset. Will most of your hunting clothes be used for hunting which involves a lot of movement in moderate weather conditions, or does it need to be suitable for extreme weather conditions while you remain relatively still?

Quality is a key factor

If you have to buy hunting apparel on a restricted budget, you are well-advised to save a little on the inner and intermediate layers and spend more on the outer layer of clothing. Half of your body heat is lost from the head, so it's important to wear the right headgear. Hands and feet also need to be kept warm, so that cold does not spread to the rest of the body.

The triple-layer principle

INNER LAYER

The perfect choice of underwear depends on the temperature and the degree of physical exertion. In warm weather and when you are physically active, synthetic fabrics are recommended as they ensure effective moisture-wicking. In cold weather on the other hand, and when you are not moving about much, the typical choice would be woollen underwear. Underwear should be close-fitting, but not too tight. Your vest should always be long enough to prevent you from getting a cold midriff.

Cotton underwear is comfortable, but it is not suitable for intense physical exertion.

Wool wicks moisture much more effectively than cotton, but not quite as well as synthetics. On the other hand, wool warms better than synthetics – whether it's wet or dry.

The fibres in synthetic fabrics such as polyester absorb very little moisture, which means that these fabrics have excellent moisture-wicking properties.

MIDDLE LAYER

The insulating intermediate layer typically comprises a shirt, fleece, pile jacket or similar. If the temperature exceeds 10-15 °C, and there is no rain and only a light breeze, there is no real reason to wear more than underwear and a fleece.

In windier conditions, a windproof / breathable fleece would be the more comfortable option. The advantage of a fleece is that it breathes better than a conventional outer shell, which is designed to withstand even the heaviest rain. The fit of your fleece is incredibly important. A soft chunky fleece may feel great when you try it on in the shop, but if it is too thick, it will be too bulky to wear under a jacket.

A fleece is undoubtedly the most popular choice for the insulating intermediate layer of clothing, as it dries significantly faster than wool.

If you need to be cost-conscious, a fleece is one item you can economise on.

OUTER LAYER

When the weather is at its worst, it is the outermost layer – or outer shell – which provides the most important protection. If you are moving about a lot, you will seldom need more than one intermediate layer under the outer shell – for example a thin fleece. More intermediate layers or thicker layers will be required mostly in connection with stationary hunting.

If you are very active, your outer garment needs to be wind and waterproof – as well as being breathable, so that you are not left drenched from within. Here, choose one of Deerhunter's products with a Deer-Tex® membrane, which is 100% waterproof, windproof and breathable.

Deerhunter Membranes and warranty

Deer-TEX® Membrane

Deer-TEX® membrane lies loosely between the outer fabric and the other layers. All seams are taped, making the product 100% waterproof. The loose membrane is particularly suited to products where there is a major emphasis on being noiseless, for example during stalking and bow hunting.

Deer-TEX® Performance Shell

Deer-TEX Performance Shell membrane is laminated to the rear side of the outer fabric and taped in all seams, making it 100% waterproof. This membrane is exceptionally light, and is therefore used in Deerhunter's more technical products.

Deer-TEX® Supreme

Deer-TEX® Supreme is a soft lightweight membrane which is only used in Deerhunter's exclusive DXO series. During its production, Deerhunter has placed emphasis on its breathability being on par with its water penetration resistance. Deer-TEX Supreme is therefore a membrane which is ideal for working with wool.

Deerhunter® Stormliner®

The Deerhunter Stormliner® membrane is typically laminated to the outer fabric or between two layers of fabric, and is used on products without taped seams. Deerhunter Stormliner® membrane allows a very high level of breathability.

Membrane warranty

Five-year warranty on manufacturing defects in the Deer-TEX® membrane. In the event of claims: Return the product together with this product information label/hangtag and the receipt to your dealer.

NB: The Deer-TEX® membrane warranty only covers manufacturing defects. The 5-year warranty applies ONLY to products with Deer-TEX membranes, not the entire series.

Care instructions

If your hunting apparel incorporates a membrane, it is important that you do not add fabric softener when washing the garment. The membrane ensures that you are kept dry when hunting, and that your skin can breathe. If you use fabric softener, it will clog the pores in the membrane, and significantly reduce the garment's breathability. In order to maintain the permeability of the membrane, it is a good idea if the garment is completely dry before it is packed away, and that you do not store it in a very warm or humid environment.

Dry garment thoroughly before storing. Do not store in areas of high temperature or humidity.

- Machine washable at 30 degrees
- Do not use softener
- Do not bleach
- Do not iron
- Do not dry clean
- Do not tumble dry
- Line Dry
